Dear Colleagues,

The Organizing Committee of the Conference “Problems of ontolinguistics – 2022: the speech world of a child (universal processes and individual manifestations)” is pleased to invite you to take part in this event. The Conference is organized by the Ontolinguistic Research Laboratory (The Herzen State Pedagogical University of Russia) and by the Department of the Theory of Grammar (Institute for Linguistic Studies, Russian Academy of Sciences), April 19-21, 2022.

The Conference will be held online.

We suggest the following issues for discussion:

- The phonetic development of a child: sequential vs. phased formation of the sound system
- The formation of the morphological component of the language system: schemata, rules or lexically based development
- The emergence of syntax: universal and language-specific features
- Acquisition of the lexical system: children’s active and passive vocabulary
- The language worldview of monolinguals and bilinguals: common and different features
- The particularities of speech development of bilingual children
- Children's word formation: general and individual features
- Psycholinguistic aspects of reading and writing in ontogenesis and dysontogenesis
- Children’s metalanguage activity and language reflection
- Language environment of a child

The conference’s working languages are Russian and English.

Applications for participation and abstracts (not less than 1000 and not more than 1500 characters including spaces) will be accepted until February 15, 2022, at the link <https://forms.gle/8JmfrNBjw1F8xSncA>

The Organizing Committee reserves the right to select presentations based on their relevance to the conference theme. Abstracts will be double-blind peer reviewed. Authors will be notified about the decision of the Organizing Committee by March 01, 2022.

Speakers will be able (if desired) to publish their articles sized 4-6 pages in the electronic digest (indexed in the RSCI). A fee will be charged for the publication. The amount of payment and the requirements will be sent in the information letter No. 2. Articles are accepted until April 01, 2022. The articles will be published in the author's edition.

All presenters will get the certificate of attendance.
